

The Add & Pass Sheets of

Mike Dickau

aka CaptainBiology

And of course the Eternal (Open) Network

This explanatory sheet was inspired and constructed by several Mail artists. Printed by Ragged Edge Press, NYC.

On Add and Pass Sheets

History:

This mail art format was created by artist Ray Johnson in the 60's and over time it became something like "creative chain art." Originally, Johnson would create a drawing or collage of some sort and send it to someone with instructions some way. The recipient was then instructed to pass/mail it along to a specified third party. In this way, Johnson used the add-n-pass format as a vehicle for introducing people to each other via the postal system. This practice has evolved. Pieces are more open ended, encouraging participants to add/photocopy and pass on to whoever they want. Contributors are encouraged to send a copy to those who modified the sheet and who have placed their contact information on ongoing sharing in the Mail Art Network.

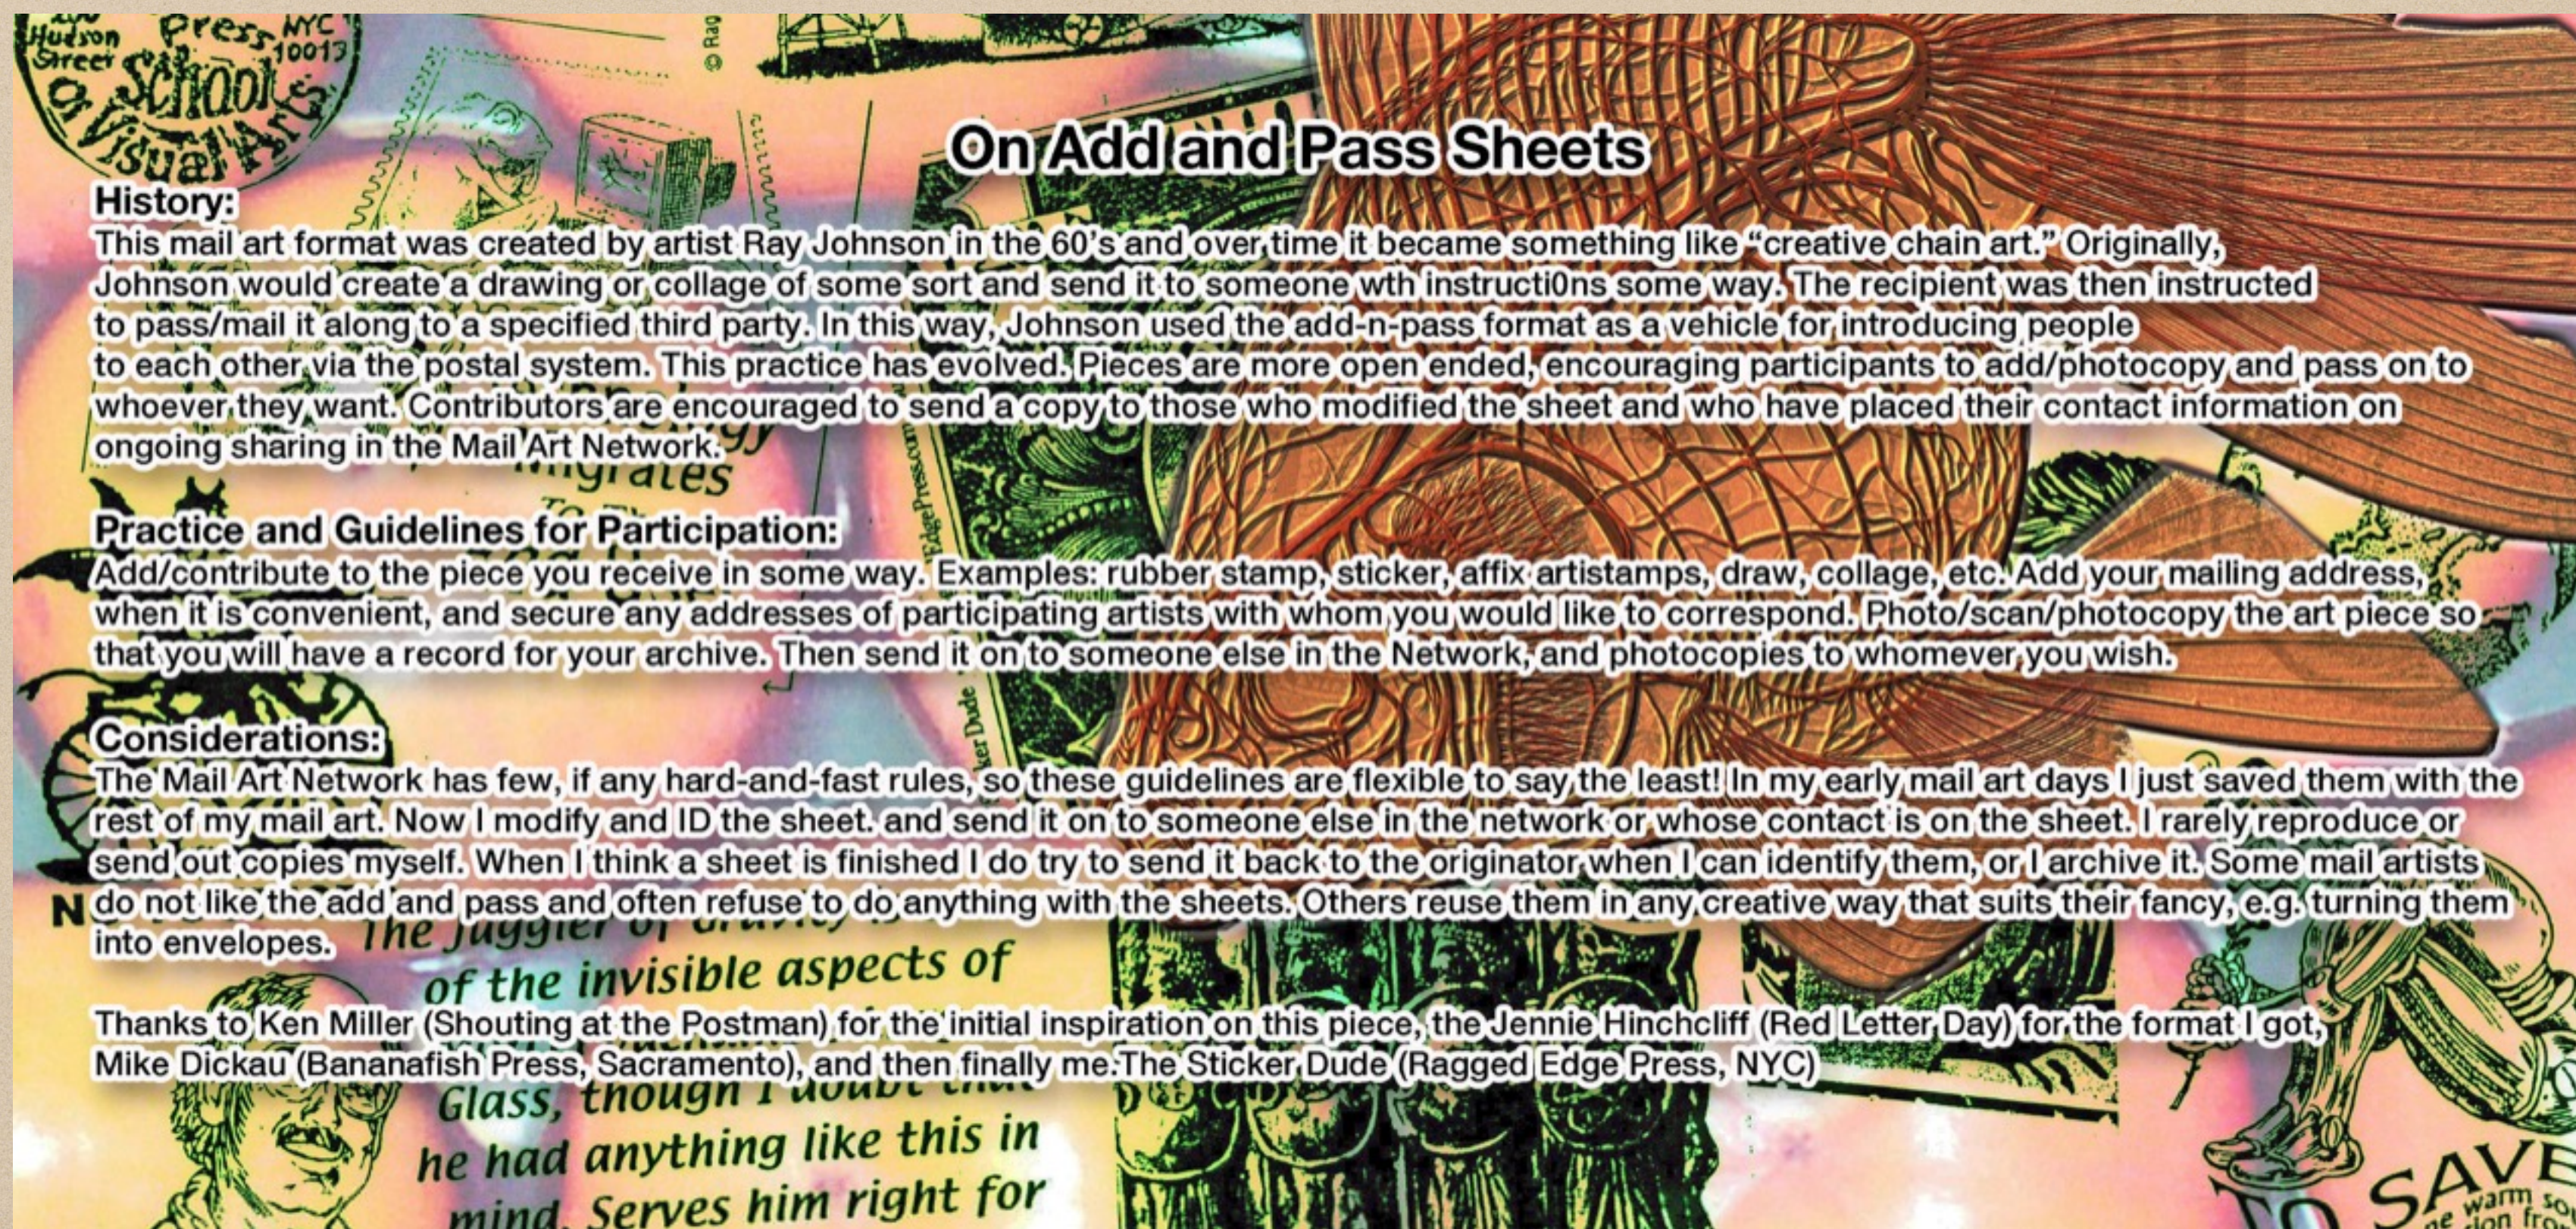

Practice and Guidelines for Participation:

Add/contribute to the piece you receive in some way. Examples: rubber stamp, sticker, affix artistamps, draw, collage, etc. Add your mailing address, when it is convenient, and secure any addresses of participating artists with whom you would like to correspond. Photo/scan/photocopy the art piece so that you will have a record for your archive. Then send it on to someone else in the Network, and photocopies to whomever you wish.

Considerations:

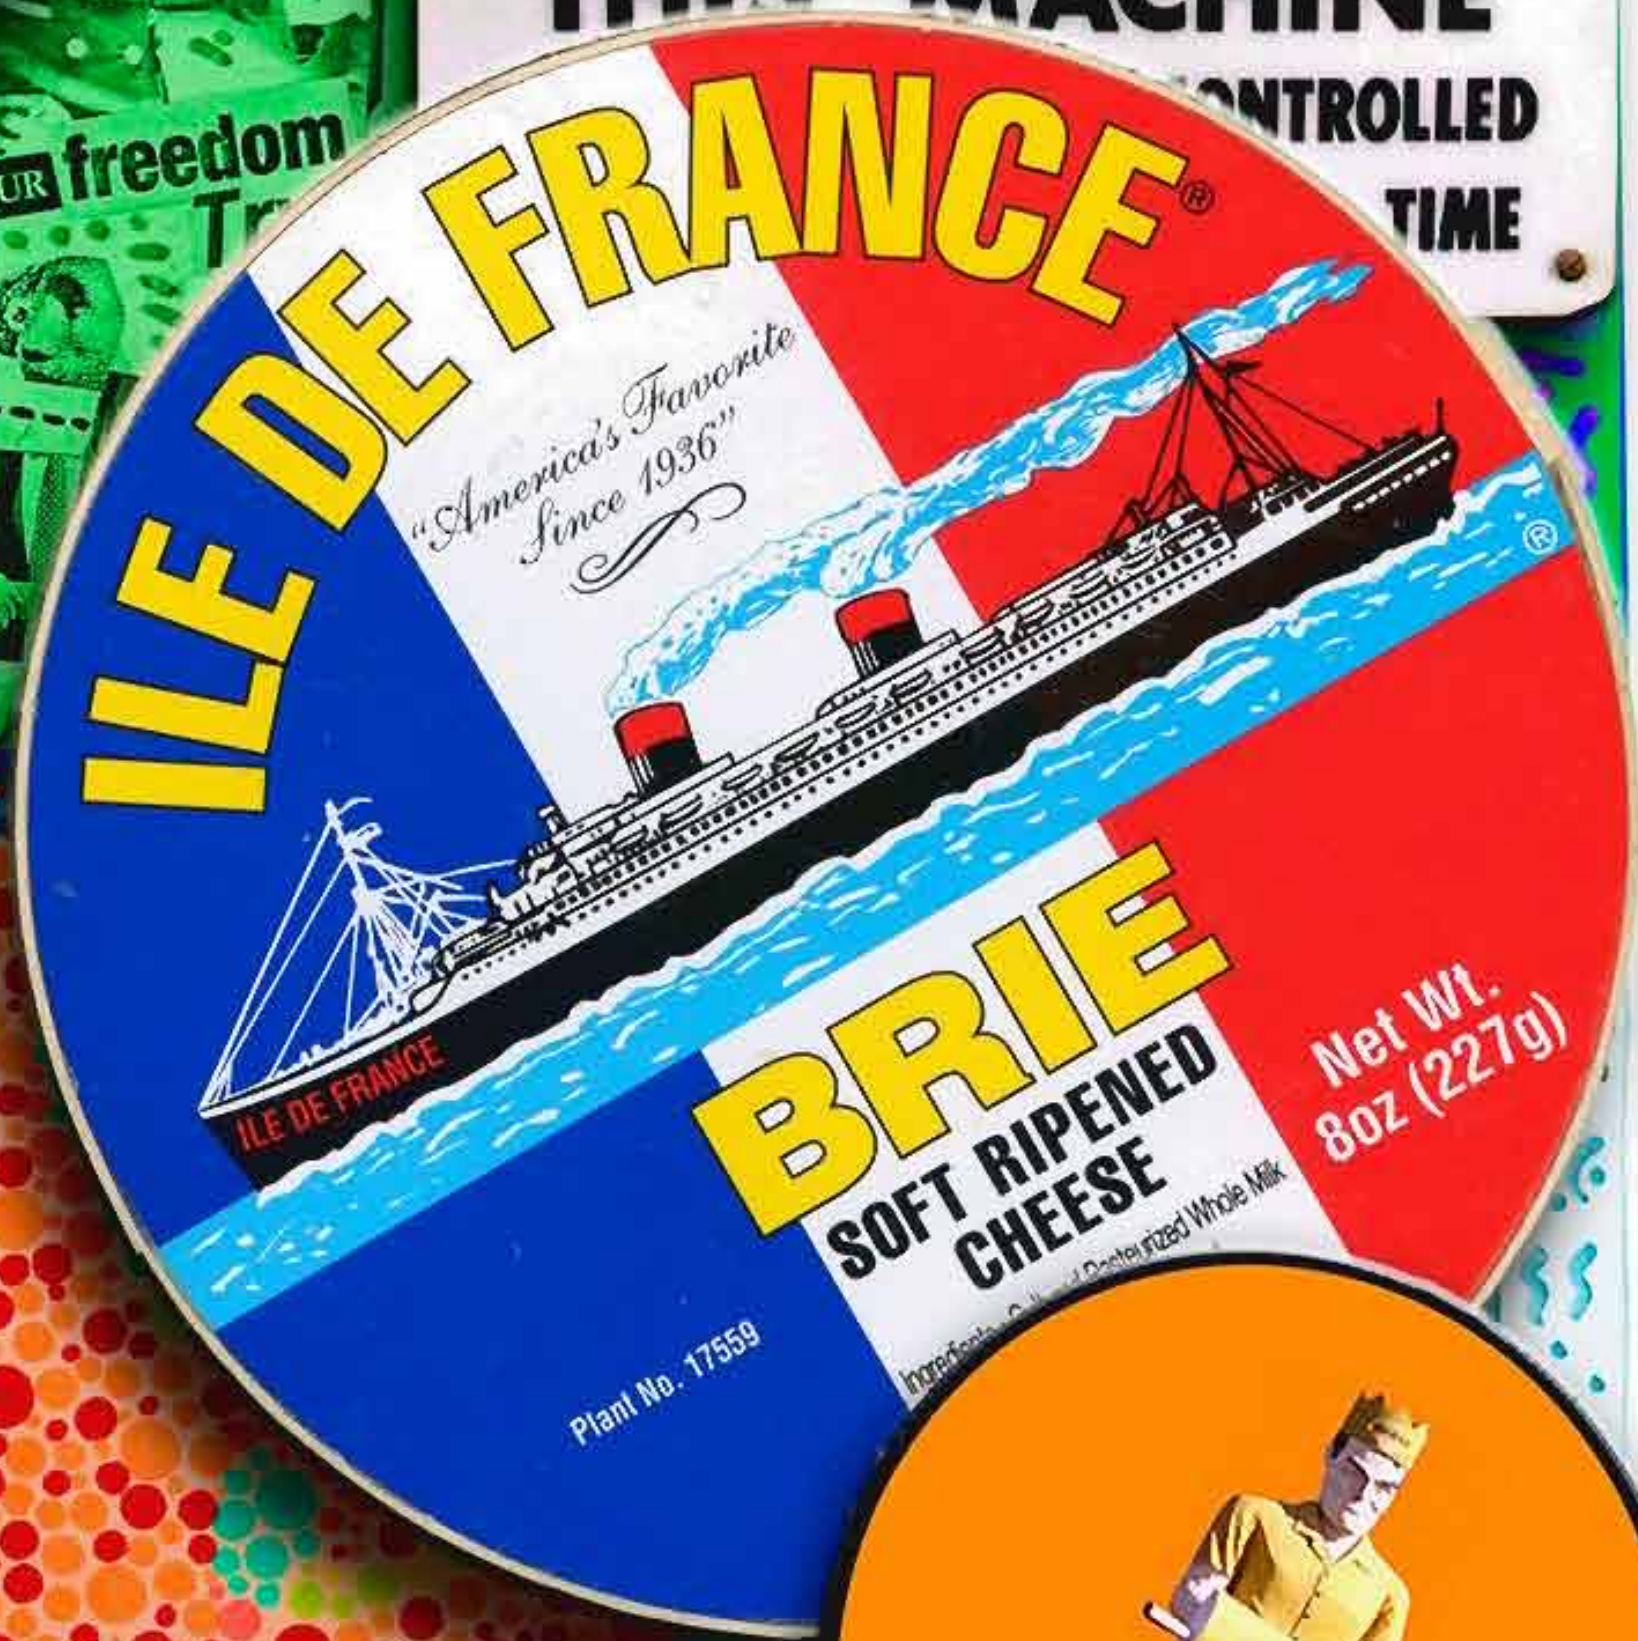

The Mail Art Network has few, if any hard-and-fast rules, so these guidelines are flexible to say the least! In my early mail art days I just saved them with the rest of my mail art. Now I modify and ID the sheet, and send it on to someone else in the network or whose contact is on the sheet. I rarely reproduce or send out copies myself. When I think a sheet is finished I do try to send it back to the originator when I can identify them, or I archive it. Some mail artists do not like the add and pass and often refuse to do anything with the sheets. Others reuse them in any creative way that suits their fancy, e.g. turning them into envelopes.

Thanks to Ken Miller (Shouting at the Postman) for the initial inspiration on this piece, the Jennie Hinchcliff (Red Letter Day) for the format I got, Mike Dickau (Bananafish Press, Sacramento), and then finally me: The Sticker Dude (Ragged Edge Press, NYC)
